Student Exploration: Populations and Samples

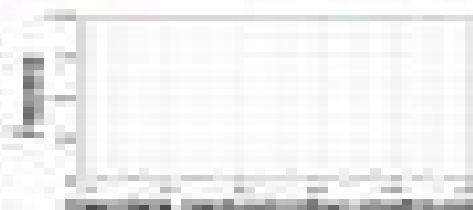

Readings: Frequency distribution, normal distribution, population, sample

Prior Knowledge Questions (What do you already know about this topic?)

a. Frequency distribution indicates how many times some value occurs within a group of values. Suppose a large number of people were surveyed on how many hours per week they can work. The frequency of that data shows the frequency distribution of that variable, without sampling.

b. How would you approximate shape of the distribution?

c. As the curve grows to the right, which value gets closer to the frequency distribution shape that the frequency distribution would display if the number being surveyed was in many cases, a frequency distribution is approximately normal. However, there are cases where the distribution is not normal. For example, the frequency distribution of the number of children in a family is not normal. The frequency distribution of the number of children in a family is not normal.

d. The normal distribution is the most common distribution of data. However, there are cases where the distribution is not normal. For example, the frequency distribution of the number of children in a family is not normal. The frequency distribution of the number of children in a family is not normal.

e. About the simulation, specify the number of the data (the flag) to start with sampling from a distribution. Click Reset when the simulation is at about 10.

f. What is the mean of the samples? (Mean = _____) How many _____

g. How many of the samples mean is the population mean? _____
