The Respiratory System

A healthy respiratory system allows an individual to receive oxygen and respiratory substances (nutrients) of the blood into the cells of the body. The function of the respiratory system is to exchange gases (oxygen and carbon dioxide) with the body. The lungs are the primary organ of the respiratory system that performs this function.

The lungs take up a large portion of the thoracic cavity and are partially attached to the surface of the thoracic cavity by serous pleural membranes. The pleural membranes produce a lubricated surface that allows the lungs to slide in the rib cage. The airway, air is pulled into the lungs through the trachea and the bronchi. The trachea and bronchi are made of cartilage. They may be affected by disease, infection, or environmental factors.

The amount of oxygen needed by the body depends on the amount of activity. The body uses oxygen to produce energy. The amount of oxygen needed by the body depends on the amount of activity.
