

Hamlet – Act II scene ii: Hamlet's second soliloquy appears at the end of this scene. Below is a histogram. It shows the frequency of particular words. Basically the bigger the word the more times it appears in the text. What predictions can you make about Hamlet and his state of mind, using these words alone? Read on from where the players enter "Hamlet: Why, and then you know..."

(lines 393 - 394) up to Act III scene i. Use these questions to help annotation of Hamlet's soliloquy in Act 2 Scene 2

1. This soliloquy shows Hamlet going over various incidents and ideas. Write a summary of what the soliloquy is about. What are the key 'sections'? Is there a turning point? What philosophical debates do this speech relate to?
2. Throughout this speech Hamlet refers to himself in all sorts of derogatory ways. Mark all the references he makes to himself you can find. Remember to write a key or legend on the soliloquy to identify aspects if you want to.
3. Explain how Hamlet's offensive words about himself, here and in previous speeches, tell us anything about his character, state of mind or problems. You might start, 'Hamlet's continual references to himself as vile and cowardly, such as '...:' and '....' emphasise to the audience that ...'
4. As before Hamlet uses a number of questions in the soliloquy. Look at the way the questions stop about half way through this speech. What might this suggest about Hamlet's state of mind towards the end of the speech? Are there any other language techniques used by Hamlet in this speech?
5. Find the references to Claudius in this speech and underline them (in a different colour to your other underlining if possible). Is there any allusion used here? Do you notice any similarities between these references and earlier ones? Explain, on the soliloquy, why 'slave's offal' is such an effective way to describe Claudius's dead body.
6. From line 541 to the end of the soliloquy Hamlet seems much calmer and determined to revenge his father's death. Why do you think he is more confident and how is this expressed through his speech? Select some key lines and identify any language techniques used.
