Kane, Graydon B. Larrabee, 2013-11-27 Until comparatively recently trace analysis techniques were in general directed toward the determination of impurities in bulk materials Methods were developed for very high relative sensitivity and the values determined were average values Sampling procedures were devised which eliminated the so called sampling error However in the last decade or so a number of developments have shown that for many purposes the distribution of defects within a material can confer important new properties on the material Perhaps the most striking example of this is given by semiconductors a whole new industry has emerged in barely twenty years based entirely on the controlled distribution of defects within what a few years before would have been regarded as a pure homogeneous crystal Other examples exist in biochemistry metallurgy polymers and of course catalysis In addition to this of the importance of distribution there has also been a recognition growing awareness that physical defects are as important as chemical defects We are of course using the word defect to imply some discontinuity in the material and not in any derogatory sense This broadening of the field of interest led the Materials Advisory Board I to recommend a new definition for the discipline Materials Characterization to encompass this wider concept of the determination of the structure and composition of materials In characterizing a material perhaps the most important special area of interest is the surface Enzyme Engineering Volume 2 E. Pye, 2012-12-06 Considerable worldwide interest has arisen in recent years in the controlled use of enzymes as catalysts in industrial processing analytical chemistry and medical therapy This interest has generated the new interdisciplinary field of Enzyme Engineering which includes both the scientific and technologic aspects of the production purification immobilization and application of enzymes in a variety of situations and reactor configurations A series of Engineering Foundation conferences on Enzyme Engineering was initiated to provide an international forum for the exchange of ideas and information over the entire range of this new field. The outstanding success of the first two conferences attests to the vigor and potential of this field to contribute significantly to a better understanding and resolution of some of the major problems faced by mankind. The first conference which was held August 9-13, 1971 at Henniker, New Hampshire, U.S.A. aided significantly in molding the several traditional disciplines that interact to form the field of Enzyme Engineering. The conference was highly successful mainly because many of the key scientists and engineers from the several facets of Enzyme Engineering were brought together for the first time at a single residential meeting. The result was an exchange of ideas and education of one another in the pertinent principles of the diverse disciplines which contribute to this field. The second conference held August 5-10, 1973 at Henniker, New Hampshire, U.S.A. Critical Stability Constants Arthur E. Martell, Robert M. Smith, 2013-06-29. Over the past twenty-five years the Commission on Equilibrium Data of the Analytical Division of the International Union of Pure and Applied Chemistry has been sponsoring a noncritical compilation of metal complex formation constants and related equilibrium constants. This work was extensive in scope and resulted in publication of two large volumes of Stability Constants by the Chemical Society, London. The first volume edited by L. G. Sillen for inorganic ligands and by A. E. Martell for organic ligands was published in 1964 and covered the literature through 1962. The second volume subtitled Supplement No. 1 edited by L. G. Sillen and E. Hogfeldt for inorganic ligands and A. E. Martell and R. M. Smith for organic ligands was published in 1971 and covered the literature up to 1969. These two large compilations attempted to cover all papers in the field related to metal complex equilibria, heats, entropies, and free energies. Most recently a noncritical compilation of organic ligands by D. D. Perrin, Pergamon Press, extended coverage of the literature through 1973, and a similar volume for inorganic ligands by E. Hogfeldt covered through 1974. Since it was the policy of the Commission during that period to avoid decisions concerning the quality and reliability of the published work, the compilation would frequently contain from ten to twenty values for a single equilibrium constant.
