- Price sensitivity to the price: how much will an individual spend on a particular good if the price changes?
 - If the individual is price sensitive, then a small change in price will greatly affect her/his demand for the good. An increase in price will reduce the quantity demanded.
 - When a good is inelastic, the quantity demanded will not change. The total amount is insensitive to the price change. Considered to be inelastic with the highest price elasticity.
 - When a product is elastic, "elastic" and responsive to the change. If there is a small change in price, the quantity demanded will change a great deal. If there is a small change, large price will be required to affect the quantity demanded. This indicates that the consumer has additional choices to purchase to substitute the good.
 - Using the elasticity and income of a individual to make an important decision is not an "Arbitrary decision" and not an "Arbitrary decision" and not an "Arbitrary decision".
