algorithms and are useful in some circumstances. We can think of a search tree as a backward-chaining search using depth-first search. That is, starting with the goal, we first try to find a way to achieve the goal. If we fail, we try to find a way to achieve the goal by achieving the goal by achieving the goal. This is the approach taken by depth-first programming, which can achieve some of the same results as forward-chaining. Using logic programming combines the good ideas of forward-chaining with the forward-chaining efficiency of backward-chaining. It is also simpler, the search space is smaller, which means that the programmer will not have to deal with large search spaces. It is not possible to get an infinite loop with depth-first search, but the search is a potentially infinite number of steps.
