Challenging Health Inequalities Elizabeth Dowler,Nick J. Spencer,2007-09-05 This volume provides a timely assessment of government policy and progress in tackling health inequalities in the UK over the decade from 1997 Oxford Handbook of Paediatrics Robert C Tasker,Robert J McClure,Carlo L Acerini,2008-04-24 This handbook covers all significant aspects of acute and chronic paediatrics Areas such as neonatology surgery genetics and congenital malformations and child protection are covered in a user friendly and succinct style Public Expenditure on Health and Personal Social Services 2006 Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Health Committee,2006-11-21 This memorandum contains the replies received from the Department of Health to a series of questions tabled by the Select Committee on a wide range of issues grouped under the headings of expenditure investment including the private finance initiative PFI NHS Plan and reforms including staffing pay and contracts treatment outside the NHS and the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence NICE breakdown of spending programme activity performance and efficiency and departmental annual report Caring for Vulnerable Babies Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Committee of Public Accounts,Great Britain, Parliament House of Commons Committee of Public Accounts Staff,2008 Neonatal services provide care to babies born prematurely or with an illness or condition which requires specialist care Over the last 20 years neonatal services have undergone substantial organisational and technological changes whilst remaining a challenging and innovative area of medicine Following a 2003 review of neonatal services the 180 neonatal units based in the English National Health Service and Foundation Trusts were organised into 23 geographical managed clinical networks Demand for neonatal care has risen year on year In 2007 around 60 000 babies roughly one in ten births were admitted to neonatal units at a cost to the NHS of some 420 million The networks have developed at different rates and two areas have yet to establish a formal managed network Networks have helped improve communication and co ordination between units and have made progress in reducing the number of times

babies have to be transferred long distance to obtain the necessary level of care but there has been less progress on a key review recommendation for networks to re designate units to ensure that the supply of intensive intermediate and special care matches demand The NHS still has limited data on patient outcomes other than mortality rates which show unexplained variations between networks Constraints in capacity mean that the Department of Health is still struggling to meet the demand for neonatal services and problems over recruiting retaining and training the staff required to deliver the service remains a major challenge Financial management at the unit level needs to be improved Neonatal units have a poor understanding of the costs of running their unit and there are differences in how units determine their charge for a cot day with wide variations in charges between similar types of unit

Tackling inequalities in life expectancy in areas with the worst health and deprivation Great Britain: National Audit Office,2010-07-02 The Department of Health has made a serious attempt to tackle health inequalities across England But having set a target in 2000 to reduce health inequalities it took time to embed the issue in the policy and planning framework of the NHS and to develop an evidence base of the most cost effective interventions Although life expectancy overall has increased the gap in life expectancy between the national average and the Government's dedicated spearhead areas has continued to widen. The Department will not meet its target to reduce the health inequalities gap by 10 per cent by 2010 as measured by life expectancy at birth if current trends continue. The Department's strategy lacked effective mechanisms to achieve the target because the evidence base was still being developed. Three key cost effective interventions to reduce the gap in life expectancy were identified by the Health Inequalities Intervention Tool: increase the prescribing of drugs to control blood pressure; second of drugs to reduce cholesterol by 40 per cent; and double the capacity of smoking cessation services. But these interventions have not yet been used on the scale required. Primary care trusts are required to address health inequalities from within their general budgets and it is not possible to identify how much money has been spent. PCTs in spearhead areas had 230 more per head to spend than the PCTs in non-spearheads but there is evidence that some of the extra money is absorbed by higher hospital costs in deprived areas.

On May 11 2009 the Institute of Medicine held a public workshop to discuss the role of state and local policy initiatives to reduce health disparities. The workshop brought together stakeholders to learn more about what works in reducing health disparities and ways to focus on localized efforts when working to reduce health disparities.
