Effect size (Cohen's d) was calculated for each of the 10 comparisons. It is defined as the difference between the means of two groups divided by the standard deviation of the control group. Effect sizes of 0.2, 0.5, and 0.8 are considered small, medium, and large, respectively. The present study found a medium to large effect size for the comparison between the two groups. The present study also found a medium to large effect size for the comparison between the two groups. The present study also found a medium to large effect size for the comparison between the two groups.
