innovations in Learning Leona Schauble,Robert Glaser,2013-04-03 This volume documents the growth of a new kind of interdisciplinary teamwork that is evolving among practitioners researchers teacher educators and community partners Its premise the design of learning environments and the development of theory must proceed in a mutually supportive fashion Scientific researchers have learned that a prerequisite to studying the kinds of learning that matter is helping to shoulder the responsibility for ensuring that these forms of learning occur To support and study learning researchers are increasingly making major and long term investments in the design and maintenance of contexts for learning Practitioners are assuming new roles as well reflecting an increasing awareness of the need to move beyond skillful doing If developing learning contexts are to be protected within and expanded beyond the systems that surround them it is necessary to foster professional communities that will support reflection about practice including the generation and evaluation of rich and flexible environments for student thinking One consequence of recent reforms is that teachers are increasingly regarding such tasks as central to their professional development

Innovations in Learning New Environments for Education describes coordinated interaction between educational design on the one hand and the development of learning theory on the other through a series of examples These examples have been chosen because they are continuing proven programs with evidence of success Contributors to the volume are researchers and practitioners who have played a role in inventing these programs and have guided their development over a period of years Rather than choosing illustrations of a pipeline or application model of research from research and then to practice the editors of this volume have selected interventions in which researchers and practitioners work together persistently to forge common understanding Such activity is necessarily interdisciplinary often encompassing long spans of time and is more akin to engineering in the field than to laboratory science The common themes that emerge from this activity for example the role of tools talk and community belong exclusively neither to theory nor to practice but to their intersection in commitment to specific contexts of learning and continuing contributions to practice and underlying theory This volume is organized into three sections that reflect different levels and kinds of learning contexts Each of these levels has been the focus of recent cognitive and reform applications to learning and schooling The first offers examples of effective learning in informal settings the second discusses innovative approaches to schooling at the classroom level and the third reviews reforms that regard the entire school as the appropriate unit of change

Neuropsychology Gerald Goldstein, Paul David Nussbaum, Sue R.

Beers, 2013-06-29 In this volume of the series Human Brain Function Assessment and Rehabilitation we cover the area of how brain function is assessed with behavioral or neuropsychological instruments These assessments are typically conducted by clinical neuropsychologists or behavioral neurologists and so we made an effort to present the somewhat differing approaches to these two related disciplines Clinical neuropsychologists are psychologists who typically utilize standardized tests while behavioral neurologists are physicians who generally assess brain function as part of the clinical neurological evaluation Both approaches have much to offer The basic assumption of neuropsychological assessment is that the brain is the organ of behavior and therefore the condition of the brain may be evaluated with behavioral measures Neuropsychological tests are those measures found by research to be particularly sensitive to alterations in brain function An adequate neuropsychological test is a procedure that can be related to some objective measure of alteration in brain function Over the years these objective measures have changed but generally involve documentation through direct observation of brain tissue or through histological pathological neuroimaging or other laboratory procedures The methods described in the first two volumes of this series describe the neuroimaging procedures that are often used in the validation of neuropsychological tests

Second Language Anxiety Richard L. Sparks,2025-07-11 This book traces and summarizes theoretical insights and empirical findings on the topic of whether or not anxiety for language learning could be a causal variable for individual differences in language learning The author brings together three decades of research to show that first language L1 skills and second language L2 aptitude are confounding variables in studies of language anxiety and that learners levels of anxiety for L2 learning are strongly related to their levels of language achievement These findings have suggested that language anxiety instruments reflect students accurate self perceptions of their language skills and their levels of L1 achievement and L2 aptitude The research presented in this book holds the potential to change the ways in which L2 educators and researchers think about language anxiety how language anxiety is assessed how investigations into language anxiety are conducted and how L2 teachers respond to anxiety in the classroom

Test Policy and Test Performance: Education, Language, and Culture Bernard R. Gifford,2012-12-06 Bernard R Gifford In the United States the standardized test has become one of the major sources of information for reducing uncertainty in the determination of individual merit and in the allocation of merit based educational training and employment opportunities Most major institutions of higher education require applicants to supplement their records of academic achievements with scores on standardized tests Similarly in the workplace as a condition of employment or assignment to training programs more and more employers are requiring prospective employees to sit for standardized tests In short with increasing frequency and intensity individual members of the political economy are required to transmit to the opportunity marketplace scores on standardized examinations that purport to be objective measures of their abilities talents and potential In many instances these test scores are the only signals about their skills that job applicants are permitted to send to prospective employers

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION ON TESTING AND PUBLIC POLICY In view of the importance of these issues to our current national agenda it was proposed that the Human Rights and Governance and the Education and Culture Programs of the Ford Foundation support the establishment of a blue ribbon National Commission on Testing and Public Policy to investigate some of the major problems as well as the untapped opportunities created by recent trends in the use of standardized tests particularly in the workplace and in schools
