

DIAGNOSTIC REPORTS IN SPEECH- LANGUAGE PATHOLOGY: A SPEECH-LANGUAGE PATHOLOGIST'S WRITTEN LIAISON

INTRODUCTION:

Almost all health science professions use some form of a diagnostic report. The general definition of a diagnostic report is a standardized report that summarizes the medical history of a client in a clear and concise way that can be understood by any professional in the field. The reason for having diagnostic reports is that they allow a client to switch health care providers without the risk of there being a miscommunication between professionals or between the professional and the client. Say, for example, that a client is taking a medication that cannot be mixed with a certain chemical. This chemical is not the type of thing he would normally interact with so he doesn't know it is a problem. When he moves, his new doctor asks if he's taking any medications, and he cannot pronounce the long chemical name of the medicine, so he tries to explain what it is with no success. The new doctor doesn't worry about it and in one of the tests, gives him the chemical that is contraindicated by his medication, and it causes severe complications.

The point of a diagnostic report in that scenario would be to allow the new doctor to look on his medical records and see that his client takes this medication. Assuming that he is a well-educated doctor, he would then be able to know that the test with the chemical would be contraindicated. In Speech-Language Pathology, there are rarely cases that would have that level of severity if misunderstood, but there are tests that could be re-administered for no reason, and one's speech therapy progress could go unknown if there is no diagnostic report.

It is self-evident that this is the reason diagnostic reports are written, but why are they written the way they are? What does each section of a diagnostic report say about the doctor that writes it? Because this paper is not explaining what a diagnostic report is, but why it is, it is necessary to look a step deeper. A diagnostic report is a genre that lends itself as an excellent example of what Berkenkotter and Huckin (1993) call "situatedness". In their article they define situatedness as the necessity to participate within, "the communicative activities of daily and professional life." (482). Each health care profession is in itself, a discourse community, but also, every office has its community as well. The real purpose of a diagnostic report is to be a liaison between the smaller discourse communities to allow for the universal comprehension of the larger discourse community of, in this case, all the speech-language pathologists within a language.

A Guide to Clinical Assessment and Professional Report Writing in Speech-Language Pathology Renee Fabus, 2024-06-01 Learning to assess speech and language disorders and write diagnostic reports may be an overwhelming experience especially when most texts don't cover both topics at once. With that in mind, A Guide to Clinical Assessment and Professional Report Writing in Speech Language Pathology Second Edition combines the latest assessment protocols and diagnostic techniques with vital diagnostic report writing tools into a single definitive guide. Cyndi Stein, Rubin, Renee Fabus, and their contributors recognize that clinical assessment is inextricably linked to report writing and have updated this Second Edition to synthesize the two. Following the introductory chapters which discuss the basics of assessment and report writing, each subsequent chapter focuses on a particular disorder, provides in-depth assessment tools, and presents a corresponding sample report. Key Features: An inventory and explanation of formal and informal assessment measures; A glossary of key vocabulary; Sample case histories with assessment tools; Relevant and useful interview questions; Each disorder's background and characteristics; Assessment parameters; A differential diagnosis section; A model report. The accessible format of A Guide to Clinical Assessment and Professional Report Writing in Speech Language Pathology Second Edition will help students learn how to assess and document speech and language disorders and will also make for a perfect reference for them as clinicians for years to come.

Diagnostic Report Writing In Speech-Language Pathology Steven Blaustein, 2024-06-01 Designed to improve the report writing skills of speech language pathology students, communication sciences and disorders students, Clinical Fellows, and professionals alike, Diagnostic Report Writing in Speech Language Pathology: A Guide to Effective Communication is a one-of-a-kind text entirely dedicated to the production of an effective diagnostic speech and language evaluation. In today's academic and health care climate, accurate and clear documentation has never been more important. Diagnostic Report Writing in Speech Language Pathology seeks to demystify and simplify the challenges many students and clinicians face while learning to write speech and language evaluations by combining the science and art of assessment with an effective presentation. Dr. Steven H. Blaustein uses his more than 50 years of experience as a clinician, consultant, and professor to logically guide the reader through the necessary steps involved in the documentation of a speech and language evaluation. From discussing the initial reason for the referral and case history to the final summary, impressions, and recommendations, each step of the writing process is clearly explained. Topics included in Diagnostic Report Writing in Speech Language Pathology: Speech sound production; Oral peripheral examinations; Issues of law, fairness, and ethics; Critical information for the approval of services and third-party reimbursement; Common report writing errors to avoid; Images and tables to illustrate the process of documenting a speech and language evaluation. There is no one-size-fits-all template for documenting an evaluation. Diagnostic Report Writing in Speech Language Pathology: A Guide to Effective Communication provides the reader with the skills and knowledge necessary to compile an effective professional report that meets the needs of patients clients students and outside stakeholders

Digital Health: A Transformative Approach Helen

Almond, Carey Mather, 2023-09-25 Digital Health A Transformative Approach is designed to prepare Australia and New Zealand's future health and social care workforce for the rapidly evolving digital health landscape. It is the first local health informatics title reflecting Australasia-specific contexts and its learning objectives are aligned to National Digital Health Strategies and Frameworks. A scaffolded approach to learning makes this text suitable for all health and social care professionals from early learners developing skills to those more capable who want to adapt and lead in digital health. The text is supported by online case studies that will assist development of digital professionalism and understanding requirements of digital technology across clinical research, education and administration in diverse health and social care environments. Information presented across four units and 12 chapters that support learning and teaching and help build learners' work readiness. Scaffolded approach across three levels of capability: empowered, transitional and entrusted, suitable for undergraduate, postgraduate and ongoing professional development. Supported by an Elsevier Adaptive Quizzing (EAQ) to provide formative assessment across the three levels. Includes telehealth, electronic medical health records, clinical technologies, disaster planning, interoperability and precision health care. Additional online case studies to support advanced learning.

Technologies for Prenatal Diagnosis and Assessment of Genetic Disorders Fan Jin, Yueqiu Tan, Evica

Rajcan-Separovic, Peter C. K. Leung, 2020-06-22 Birth defects are one of the major public health concerns in the world as they cause approximately 20% of infant deaths. Genetic disorders including chromosome abnormalities and single gene disorders are the most common causes of birth defects for which there is no efficient treatment. Prenatal genetic screening and diagnosis allow early identification of affected conceptuses and facilitates reproduction planning or counseling. Molecular technologies have developed rapidly in recent years and have been widely used in screening and diagnosis of genetic disorders at all stages of prenatal development, e.g. pre-implantation, embryonic and fetal. However, their performance still needs to be validated and assessed as the balance between their advantages and disadvantages need to be discussed. With the ability to detect copy number variations, CNVs, polyploidy, uniparental disomy and maternal cell contamination, SNP-based chromosomal microarray analysis (CMA) is showing the unique importance in diagnosing chromosomal abnormalities. The interpretation of CNVs remains a challenge, however, ultrasound and biochemical screening improve the diagnosis of fetal chromosomal abnormalities. Whole exome sequencing (WES) and whole genome sequencing (WGS) play increasingly significant roles in prenatal and carrier screening for genetic disorders. NGS-based non-invasive prenatal screening (NIPS) is now widely used for detecting common autosomal aneuploidies and has shown the potential of detecting microdeletions and microduplications. However, further investigations of the sensitivity and accuracy are required and large-scale data is necessary to evaluate the performance and clinical applications of current and new methods. Recently, reports of application of newer technologies in prenatal setting became available. Examples include third-generation sequencing, reading the nucleotide sequences at the single molecule level digital PCR used for direct quantification of DNA and cell based NIPT In the followed listed papers the authors showed their successful experiences in identifying novel mutation detecting low level mosaicism or de novo mutations limited in germline cells investigating the association of the CNVs with specific phenotypic alterations by using WES CMA digital PCR and some other new developed molecular techniques More interesting the authors also presented a report about the evaluation of diagnostic yield in fetal WES which suggested a new tendency to apply WES or WGS directly for prenatal diagnosis We believed that the efficiency of scanning causative mutations and prenatal or preimplantation genetic diagnosis for genetic disorders will further improved based on the technologies of whole genomic sequencing with further improved output and resolution New techniques such as quick WES for the newborn in intensive care unit direct WGS for prenatal diagnosis and non invasive test for fetal monogenic disorders will become available in the near future Public Health Reports ,1956
