

Physical Science 101 - Kinematically Weighting

Proposed:

We want your input on the principle that we propose to use in a new weighting system.

Background:

Because of the nature of the data, we have to use a weighting system that is not a simple average. We have to use a weighting system that is not a simple average.

Proposed:

1. The first is a simple average:

A simple average, independent of the weight.

Simple average:

We will provide the following information to you in the form of a table of values:

1. The first is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The second is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The third is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The fourth is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The fifth is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table.

The difference is $\frac{\text{value of column 1} - \text{value of column 2}}{\text{value of column 1}}$ or 100%.

2. The second is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table.

Using the first two columns of the table, we will provide you with the following information: The first is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The second is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The third is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The fourth is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The fifth is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table.

3. The third is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The fourth is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The fifth is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The sixth is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table. The seventh is a simple average of the values of the first two columns of the table.
