Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CON) and an exercise group (EX). The EX group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The EX group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial or nonnatural light sources. To avoid this, there are laws that prohibit the use of such light in the home or office.
- Artificial sources of light will commonly interfere with the body's natural circadian rhythms, the length of the day and night being determined by the sun and moon's positions.
- The end of the day is the best time to sleep. It may change the phase of the circadian rhythm, but it is the best time to sleep.
- Sleep is not a continuous state. There are periods of arousal, known as REM (rapid eye movement) and REM (rapid eye movement).

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, suppose the price for the output rises. The producer will want to produce more of the output, and this will require hiring more workers. The producer will also want to use more of the other inputs, and this will require hiring more of those inputs.
