Unit 1 Review

- As a wave travels through a medium, it transports energy but does not transport matter in the direction of the wave.
- Transverse waves are waves in a direction perpendicular to the direction of wave travel. Longitudinal waves travel through a series of compressions and rarefactions.
- Waves can be described by amplitude, wavelength, frequency, period, and speed.
- As a wave travels through a medium, particles are displaced and return to their original position after the wave passes.
- Electromagnetic waves differ from other types of waves because they do not need matter through a medium.
- A medium is any substance or space, you would need to know the medium characteristics to know the wavelength.
- Given the frequency and wavelength of a wave, you would need to know the medium characteristics to know the wavelength.
- As described in period frequency, wavelength and the medium characteristics are related.
- Speed is distance through a medium, for a transverse wave, particles of matter in the medium move in the direction the wave is traveling. This type of wave is a longitudinal wave.
- Because the medium moves parallel to the direction the wave is traveling.
