Potential Output Growth Estimates for Central America and the Dominican Republic Mr. Roberto Garcia-Saltos, Fan Zhang, Iulia Ruxandra Teodoru, 2017-01-18 This paper presents estimates of potential output for all Central American economies Our findings are that potential output growth has declined in recent years in most economies of Central America Lower capital accumulation and TFP growth are accounting for most of this decline Apart from Costa Rica there are no indications of significant economic slack in 2015 in Central America Looking forward potential growth in most Central American economies is expected to continue at an average of 4 percent in the medium term due to structural constraints to capital and employment growth and low TFP growth Increasing potential growth thus should be a policy priority and structural reforms must be directed at improving business conditions product and labor markets and enhancing the capacity for innovation

Emerging Market Corporate Leverage and Global Financial Conditions Adrian Alter, Selim Elekdag, 2016-12-15 Corporate debt in emerging markets has risen significantly in recent years amid accommodative global financial conditions This paper studies the relationship of leverage growth in emerging market EM firms to U S monetary conditions and more broadly to global financial conditions We find that accommodative U S monetary conditions are reliably associated with faster EM leverage growth during the past decade Specifically a 1 percentage point decline in the U S policy rate corresponds to an appreciable increase in EM leverage growth of 9 basis points on average relative to the sample average leverage growth of 35 basis points per year This impact is more pronounced for sectors dependent on external financing for SMEs and for firms in more financially open EMs with less flexible exchange rates The findings suggest that global financial conditions affect EM firms leverage growth in part by influencing domestic interest rates and by relaxing corporate borrowing constraints
