Description of Classroom Composition

The classroom observation was carried out in a kindergarten class of the Haring Center (located on the campus of University of Washington (Seattle, WA)). The classroom has an observation booth with a small window that enables researchers, educators or even parents observe the activities without attracting learners' attention. The classroom walls are covered with pictures, numbers, letters, and various objects, which creates a positive learning environment. There is a schedule on the board where all classes are listed. The classroom has several areas including students' and teachers' desks, closets for tools and a play area.

Types of Activities

During the observation, the children were engaged in several activities. The learners were divided into small groups (with a teacher in each group) during the larger part of the class. The activities included playing some toys, playing with plasticine, and listening to the teacher playing the guitar (in a playground outside the classroom). The learners played with cars and pet toys communicating with each other acting as the toy they had. Several girls were playing with plasticine making some objects while the teacher helped them use particular colors, make some shapes, use their rolling pins, and knives. The learners, who listened to the teacher playing the guitar, seemed very engaged as they listened very carefully (with smiles on their faces) though they did not dance or sing.

Types of Instructional Strategies

Coach modeling and cooperative learning were major instructional strategies used during the class. Teachers were sitting next to the learners engaging them in conversations through storytelling. They also managed to provide assistance and materials needed to complete tasks. The coach modeling strategy involved the teacher

Language and Cognition Lawrence J. Raphael, 1984-01-01 We are pleased to be able to honor Arthur J Bronstein with this volume of essays We are all the more pleased because the volume has considerable intrinsic merit but neither the reader nor Arthur should have any doubts about our primary purpose in assembling this book That the collection is intrinsically valuable is in itself a tribute to the man whom it honors The contributing authors are all colleagues students and friends of Arthur Readers who are acquainted with Arthur will not be surprised by the broad range of academic expertise which has been brought to bear on the subject of language in this book They will recognize that Arthur's own range of expertise and interest is only barely matched by the contents of the essays and the backgrounds of their authors On the other hand those who know little about Arthur may have thought of him primarily in narrow association with phonetics and linguistics most likely as the author of The Pronunciation of American English surely the most influential of American phonetics texts during the last quarter of a century Although such an association is in many respects appropriate it is altogether too limited but this will not deter us from using it as the basis for a relevant and we hope revealing metaphor about Arthur J
