nutritional and health promoting benefits of olives and olive oils have been proven by an ever increasing body of science. From cardiovascular benefits to anti microbial anti cancer antioxidant activity and effects on macrophages and apoptosis to cellular and pathophysiological processes, olives and olive oils are proving important in many healthful ways. For example, reactive components in olive oils or olive oil by products have now been isolated and identified. These include tyrosol, hydroxytyrosol, 3,4-dihydroxyphenyl acetic acid, elenolic acid, and oleuropein. Oleic acid is the main monosaturated fatty acid of olive oil. These have putative protective effects and modulate the biochemistry of a variety of cell types including those of the vascular system. Some but not all components have been characterised by their putative pharmacological properties. It is possible that usage of these aforementioned products may have beneficial application in other diseases. However, in order for this cross fertilization to take place, a comprehensive understanding of olives and olive oils is required. Finding this knowledge in a single volume provides a key resource for scientists in a variety of food and nutritional roles. Explores olives and olive oil from their general aspects to the detailed level of important micro and micronutrients. Includes coverage of various methodologies for analysis to help scientists and chemists determine the most appropriate option for their own studies, including those of olive related compounds in other foods. Relates in a single volume resource information for food and nutritional chemists, pharmaceutical scientists, nutritionists, and dieticians. Presents information in three key categories: General aspects of olives and olive oils; Nutritional, pharmacological, and metabolic properties of olives and olive oil; Specific components of olive oil and their effects on tissue and body systems.

Olives and Olive Related Products - Innovations in Production and Processing, 2025-02-05. This book explores the types and processing of olives, olive oil, and its by products, which are increasingly recognized as an important supply of bioactive compounds. By using unique biotechnological processing methods, the value of olive mill by products can be upgraded, thus establishing a sustainable circular economy. Bioactive polyphenols such as oleuropein, obtained from olive industry by products, can be applied to develop innovative products such as nutraceuticals and cosmeceuticals. It must be emphasized that consuming extra virgin olive oil and table olives is an important part of the Mediterranean diet, offering significant benefits to human health and reducing the risk of many chronic diseases.
