Authentic Professional Learning Ann Webster-Wright, 2010-08-05 There is considerable and growing interest in professionals learning across their working lives The growth in this interest is likely premised upon the increasing percentage of those who are being employed under the designation as professionals or para professional workers in advanced industrial economies Part of being designated in this way is a requirement to be able to work autonomously and in a relatively self regulated manner Of course many other kinds of employment also demand such behaviours However there is particular attention being given to the ongoing development of workers who are seen to make crucial decisions and take actions about health legal and financial matters Part of this attention derives from expectations within the community that those who are granted relative autonomy and are often paid handsomely should be current and informed in their decision making Then like all other workers professionals are required to maintain their competence in the face of changing requirements for work Consequently a volume that seeks to inform how best this ongoing learning can be understood supported and assisted is most timely and welcomed This volume seeks to elaborate professional learning through a consideration of the concept of authentic professional learning What is proposed here is that in contrast to programmatic approaches towards professional development the process of continuing professional learning is a personal complex and diverse process that does not lend itself to easy prescription or the realisation of others' intents

Complementary Medicine in Australia and New Zealand Hans Baer, 2015-07-17 In the late nineteenth century on the eve of the formation of Australia as a nation state in 1902 the Australian medical system could be best described as a pluralistic one in the sense that while regular medicine constituted the predominant medical system it was not clearly the dominant one in that regular physicians faced competition from a wide array of alternative practitioners As regular medicine increasingly assumed the guise of being scientific it evolved into biomedicine and developed a link with corporate and state interests in the early twentieth century in Australia as in other capitalist developed societies Relying upon state support Australian biomedicine has achieved dominance over alternative medical systems such as homeopathy herbal medicine osteopathy chiropractic and naturopathy Various social forces particularly the development of the holistic health movement have served to challenge biomedical dominance in Australia like elsewhere What started out as a popular health movement in the early 1970s has evolved into the professionalized entity that is generally referred to as complementary medicine in Australia as opposed to complementary and alternative medicine in the US and UK Complementary medicine in Australia encompasses many medical systems and therapies Since the 1980s certain heterodox medical systems particularly chiropractic osteopathy acupuncture and Chinese medicine naturopathy Western herbalism and homeopathy have achieved considerable recognition from the Australian state either at the federal level or at the state and territorial levels Indeed the Australian state appears to have gone further than any other Anglophone country in terms of providing public funding for complementary medicine education Conversely it has committed a limited amount of funding for complementary medicine research compared to the United States

Women, Motherhood and Living with HIV/AIDS Pranee Liamputtong, 2013-03-12 There are about 34 million people worldwide living with HIV AIDS Half are women There has been a dramatic global increase in the rates of women living with HIV AIDS Among young women especially in developing countries infection rates are rapidly increasing Many of these women are also mothers with young infants When a woman is labeled as having HIV she is treated with suspicion and her morality is being questioned Previous research has suggested that women living with HIV AIDS can be affected by delay in diagnosis inferior access to health care services internalized stigma and a poor utilization of health services This makes it extremely difficult for women to take care of their own health needs Women are also reluctant to disclose their HIV positive status as they fear this may result in physical feelings of shame social ostracism violence or expulsion from home Women living with HIV AIDS who are also mothers carry a particularly heavy burden of being HIV infected This unique book attempts to put together results from empirical research and focuses on issues relevant to women motherhood and living with HIV AIDS which have occurred to individual women in different parts of the globe The book comprises chapters written by researchers who carry out their projects in different parts of the world and each chapter contains empirical information based on real life situations This can be used as evidence for health care providers to implement socially and culturally appropriate services to assist individuals and groups who are living with HIV AIDS in many societies The book is of interest to scholars and students in the domains of anthropology sociology social work nursing public health medicine and health professionals who have a specific interest in issues concerning women who are mothers and living with HIV AIDS from cross cultural perspective
