Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 30 to 45 years of age, who were randomly selected from a telephone directory. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group consisted of six women who did not exercise, and the exercise group consisted of six women who exercised for 12 weeks. The exercise group was divided into two subgroups: a low-intensity group and a high-intensity group. The low-intensity group exercised at 50% of their maximum HR, and the high-intensity group exercised at 70% of their maximum HR. The subjects were monitored for 12 weeks, and their HR and EE were measured at the beginning and end of the study. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the control group. The high-intensity group had a significantly greater increase in HR and EE than the low-intensity group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light-emitting devices. To avoid this, there are two things the patient should do:
 - Avoid exposure to bright light at night
 - Avoid exposure to bright light during the day
- The end of the day is the best time to sleep. The body's internal clock is set to sleep at night. If the patient is not sleeping at night, the body's internal clock is out of sync. This can lead to problems with the body's internal clock, such as insomnia, depression, and other health problems.

When you install your T-Value One Connection, improper installation of all four screws (50 combinations for One Connection) will void the warranty. Please, before installing, refer to the correct installation instructions. Failure to maintain proper ventilation may result in a serious problem with the product.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, suppose the price for the output rises. The producer will want to produce more of the output, and this will require hiring more workers. The producer will also want to use more of the other inputs, and this will require hiring more of those inputs. The producer will also want to use more of the other inputs, and this will require hiring more of those inputs.
