Shelley, Larry D. Yore, Brian B. Hand, 2008-12-30 Statistical models attempt to describe and quantify relationships between variables In the models presented in this chapter there is a response variable sometimes called dependent variable and at least one predictor variable sometimes called independent or explanatory variable When investigating a possible cause and effect type of relationship the response variable is the putative effect and the predictors are the hypothesized causes Typically there is a main predictor variable of interest other predictors in the model are called covariates Unknown covariates or other independent variables not controlled in an experiment or analysis can affect the dependent or outcome variable and mislead the conclusions made from the inquiry Bock Velleman given the model p is the probability that a relationship is seen by mere chance The smaller the p value the more confident we can be that the pattern seen in the data is not random In the type of models examined here the R measures the proportion of the variation in the response variable that is explained by the predictors specified in the model if R is close to 1 then almost all the variation in the response variable has been explained This measure is also known as the multiple correlation coefficient Statistical studies can be grouped into two types experimental and observational Handbook of Curriculum Theory, Research, and Practice Peter Pericles Trifonas, Susan Jagger, 2024-02-22 This Handbook paints a portrait of what the international field of curriculum entails in theory research and practice It represents the field accurately and comprehensively by preserving the individual voices of curriculum theorist researchers and practitioners in relation to the ideas rules and principles that have evolved out of the history of curriculum as theory research and practice dealing with specific and general issues Due to its approach to both specific and general curriculum issues the chapters in this volume vary with respect to scope Some engage the purposes and politics of schooling in general Others focus on particular topics such as evaluation the use of instructional objectives or curriculum integration They illustrate recurrent themes and historical antecedents and the curricular debates arising from and grounded in epistemological traditions Furthermore the issues raised in the handbook cut across a variety of subject areas and levels of education and how curricular research and practice have developed over time This includes the epistemological foundations of dominant ideas in the field around theory research and practice that have led to marginalization based on race class gender sexuality ethnicity age religion and ability The book argues that basic curriculum
