Reproduction in Gymnosperms

Gymnosperms are seed-bearing plants that do not produce flowers and fruits. They have a long life cycle, often taking several years to reach maturity. The male gametes are produced in the strobili (cones).

The female gametes are produced in the ovules, which are located in the cones. The ovules are protected by a thick layer of tissue called the integument. The integument is covered by a thin layer of cuticle, which helps to prevent water loss.

The male gametes are released from the strobili and travel through the air to the female gametes. The female gametes are released from the ovules and travel through the air to the male gametes.
