Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of dental caries between children who had been exposed to fluoride varnish and those who had not. A total of 600 children aged 5-7 years were examined by dentists at a community dental clinic. The children were divided into two groups: those who had received fluoride varnish treatment and those who had not. The results showed that the prevalence of dental caries was significantly lower in the group that had received fluoride varnish treatment compared to the control group.
