

Dear Principal:

It is my pleasure to recommend Laura Lynn as a teacher for your school. She is licensed and certified to teach kindergarten through third grade and I can promise you that she is a teacher of extraordinary talent and dedication. I have first-hand experience with Laura's work in the classroom. I am not only a member of the local school board, but my son was in Laura's second grade class last year.

Laura sets high, but not unreasonable, standards for her students and then she gives them the tools to succeed. Students are motivated and intellectually stimulated in her classroom and her successful teaching techniques are reflected in her students standardized test scores.

An insightful educator, Laura recognizes early on when a student is struggling in her class and she takes steps to give the student extra help before or after school, meets with parents to solicit help at home or recommends special testing and tutoring to get the student up to speed. She cares deeply about each child in her class and works hard to make sure no one is left behind.

Our school system wills Miss Laura Lynn's many teaching talents but she will be following her husband to Texas where his company has transferred him. I hope you will seriously consider hiring Laura to teach in your school. I am confident that you will be pleased with her abilities. Please feel free to contact me for further information at 555-555-5555 or by email at email@email.com.

Sincerely,

XYZ

Teacher Evaluation Kenneth D. Peterson,2000-05-19 The original edition published in August 1995 challenges current teacher evaluation and school practice The book discusses stages of teacher choice teacher responsibilities for evaluation and suggests ways for teachers to become more involved and in control of their own evaluation Combining information and techniques from his academic studies and evaluation experiences Peterson presents a coherent field tested set of new practices for teacher evaluation The revised edition adds

new chapters on the role of the principal in changed teacher evaluation how districts can transition from current practice to improved practices the use of national standards developments in using pupil achievement data and puts a new emphasis on developing sociologically The Internet as a resource for local development is encouraged 67 web sites are recommended as starting points New resources for local development have been added from extensive field testing and analysis forms have been improved and district level principles have been assembled Substantial material has been added on the topic of responding to deficient teacher practice Finally the research literature has been augmented

Breaking Down the Schoolhouse Doors Stephen V. Newton, 2018-12-14 College students finishing their academic preparation programs face the difficult challenge of transitioning into the teaching profession In a short period of time they can no longer function as a student themselves and must immediately transform into a professional educator This can be a difficult challenge for a young person and they need guidance doing this successfully The one opportunity college students have in gaining practical experience as a teacher is through the student teaching experience Unfortunately many students squander this critical opportunity and finish their assignment without maximizing their own learning and without capitalizing on professional opportunities that they will need to be hired as a teacher By building a professional brand name through a thoughtful preservice teaching experience novice educators are better able to survive the application and interview process and secure a teaching position Capitalizing on the difficult transition point between the college experience and the school environment is more important than ever When this is done in a systematic and thoughtful manner educators can be certain that they are as prepared as possible to enter the demanding profession of education

Teacher Selection and Interview Portfolios Ronald K. Theel, 2002-04-27 The major research questions for this study were a What forms do teacher interview portfolios take b What meaning do school principals make of these portfolios c How if at all are teacher portfolios being used by principals in deciding whom to hire This was a case study using qualitative research procedures The study was situated in the hiring policies and practices of Central City School District from 1995 to 1999 Semi structured interviews of 18 k 12 principals and 4 key informants were primary means of data gathering Document analyses supplemented interview data Interview portfolios typically consisted of lesson plans photographs of projects activities and teacher student interactions and supporting examples of classroom practice Statements of educational philosophy credentials letters of reference transcripts and other background information were also included Most principals viewed portfolios as a way for candidates to express their educational beliefs illustrate skills and methods and supplement the interview with examples from applicants experience Principals expressed a desire for more evidence of having used the portfolio development process as a means of reflection and introspection Overall interview portfolios were not key contributors to principals hiring decisions The reasons for this varied Some principals mentioned time constraints during interviews Others expressed skepticism that portfolios provided meaningful evidence of candidates teaching ability and people skills Propositions and implications for future research center on portfolio format and assessment criteria authenticity and self knowledge selection interview procedures teacher preparation teacher recruitment and hiring and information management in Central City School District Perhaps one of the most valuable benefits of the portfolio process lies in the development of a new norm for the profession placing discussion and debate about what constitutes good teaching into a public forum
