Progress in Preventing Childhood Obesity Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, Committee on Progress in Preventing Childhood Obesity, 2007-03-22 The remarkable increase in the prevalence of obesity among children and youth in the United States over a relatively short timespan represents one of the defining public health challenges of the 21st century The country is beginning to recognize childhood obesity as a major public health epidemic that will incur substantial costs to the nation However the current level of investment by the public and private sectors still does not match the extent of the problem There is a substantial underinvestment of resources to adequately address the scope of this obesity crisis At this early phase in addressing the epidemic actions have begun on a number of levels to improve the dietary patterns and to increase the physical activity levels of young people Schools corporations youth related organizations families communities foundations and government agencies are working to implement a variety of policy changes new programs and other interventions These efforts however generally remain fragmented and small in scale Moreover the lack of systematic monitoring and evaluation of interventions have hindered the development of an evidence base to identify apply and disseminate lessons learned and to support promising efforts to prevent childhood obesity Progress in Preventing Childhood Obesity How Do We Measure Up examines the progress made by obesity prevention initiatives in the United States from 2004 to 2006 This book emphasizes a call to action for key stakeholders and sectors to commit to and demonstrate leadership in childhood obesity prevention evaluates all policies and programs monitors their progress and encourages stakeholders to widely disseminate promising practices This book will be of interest to federal state and local government agencies educators and schools public health and health care professionals private sector companies and industry trade groups media parents and those involved in implementing community based programs and consumer advocacy
