4. In your own words, state the theory of plate tectonics?

When two oceanic crust collide, one plate is subducted (the more dense, usually the older crust).

6. Describe what happens when two plates carrying continental crust collide.

When two continental plates collide, they buckle and thicken, which pushes continental crust upward creating mountain ranges.

7. Describe what happens when a plate carrying oceanic crust collides with a plate carrying continental crust.

When an oceanic crust collides with a continental crust, the ocean crust sinks (subducts) because it is thinner and more dense.

Convection currents
