Love, 2019-04-30 Most women are raised in a context of feminine values whether they are aware of those values or not Some of the values specific to this feminine culture are interdependence caring and relationality In our time many women cross over into a masculine value culture when they take on what were traditional male roles in male evolved institutions Eventually women become aware that their own values conflict with some assumed male values They then have to compromise and adjust in order to be productive in those environments The women I have focused on in this study have because of a significant external event or events and an emerging inner vision left both structures They then however lack others around them whose values structures can reinforce adherence When these women are by themselves they experience something like a dark night of the soul Once they get beyond the pain and a sense of meaninglessness they begin to realize that they can move the constructs of reality that they can write history as well as read it An essential concern is to determine what their values are After this process their own personal vision becomes clear But the cycle isn't complete until they bring that new vision back to their people And bringing it back in a holistic sense helps to raise the moral sights of others who are influenced by that experience

The School-girls' Treasury: Stories for Thoughtful Girls Lucy Ellen Guernsey, YOU would not oftener see a pleasanter parlor than the one where Anna was sitting It was handsomely and tastefully furnished with abundance of pictures and prints on the walls There were pretty chintz curtains to the one large window and the couches and chairs were covered with the same material There was a bright blazing fire burning in the grate and a pretty kitten sat purring on the rug before it The gas was lighted and a table at Anna's elbow was strewn with books and magazines Yet Anna sat in her comfortable chair before the fire looking very doleful indeed and she had been sitting so for a whole hour She had a book in her hand but she was not reading her eyes were apparently fixed on the kitten before the fire and it was easy to see that a very little would make them overflow with tears In fact Anna felt very unhappy and in spite of her long frocks which she had worn for a full half year very babyish indeed Anna had been left at home to keep house for a week while her father and mother and the two younger children went to visit her grandfather Anna had expected a very dear friend to stay with her while her father and mother were gone Lillie Adams was to have come by the evening train and Anna had caused a dainty hot supper to be prepared for her but instead of her friend the postman brought a hurried letter from Lillie Adams saying that her father had been suddenly called abroad on business and wished her to go with him so she was going to Germany upon three days notice instead of coming to visit Anna This was a grievous disappointment no doubt and it was no wonder that Anna felt it but she was not going to work to meet it in the right way She was making the worst instead of the best of the case She would not eat a mouthful of the supper which had been prepared for her friend she betook herself to none of her usual evening employments but sat moodily before the fire picturing to herself the merry group which would be assembled at her grandfather's fireside and the delightful bustle in which Lillie Adams was engaged preparing to go abroad And contrasting these things with her own lonely condition and the long tiresome week of solitude which was before her There was great danger of the eyes overflowing after all when the opening of the door and the entrance of the cook made a moment's diversion Caroline Davis was a colored woman who had lived with Mrs Grey ever since her marriage and was regarded as a friend and counsellor by all the family from the oldest to the youngest especially by the children She was apt to speak her mind as she said on all occasions especially when she thought she saw any of the children going wrong and she had come to speak her mind now to her favorite Miss Anna

The Stories of English David Crystal,2005-09-06 A groundbreaking history of worldwide English in all its dialects differences and linguistic delights Informative distinctive a spirited celebration The Guardian In this well informed and appealing work Publishers Weekly David Crystal puts aside the usual focus on standard English and instead provides a startlingly original view of where the richness creativity and diversity of the language truly lies in the accents and dialects of nonstandard English users all over the world Whatever their regional social or ethnic background each group has a story worth telling whether it is in Scotland or Somerset South Africa or Singapore He reminds us that for several hundred wonderful years there was no such thing as incorrect English and traces the evolution of the language from a few thousand Anglo Saxons to the 1.5 billion people who

Crystal puts regional speech and writing at center stage giving a sense of the social realities behind the development of English This significant shift in perspective enables us to understand for the first time the importance of everyday previously marginalized voices in our language and provides an argument too for the way English should be taught in the future A work of impeccable scholarship that could easily serve as a standard textbook for students of linguistics but Mr Crystal reaching out to a more general audience recognizes that even the most avid reader might flinch at the sections on Old Norse grammatical influence Cleverly he has sprinkled the book with little digressions set apart in boxes that address historical mysteries strange loanwords interesting etymologies and the like The New York Times Learned and often provocative demonstrates repeatedly that common conceptions about language are often historically inaccurate split infinitives bothered no one until recently likewise sentence ending prepositions Kirkus Reviews starred review Simply the best introductory history of the English language family that we have The plan of the book is ingenious the writing lively the exposition clear and the scholarly standard uncompromisingly high J M Coetzee winner of the Nobel Prize in Literature Goodness, God, and Evil David E.

Alexander,2012-05-24 Most contemporary versions of moral realism are beset with difficulties Many of these difficulties arise because of a faulty conception of the nature of goodness Goodness God and Evil lays out and defends a new version of moral realism that re conceives the nature of goodness Alexander argues that the adjective good is best thought of as an attributive adjective and not as a predicative one In other words the adjective good logically cannot be detached from the noun or noun phrase that it modifies It is further argued that this conception of the function of the adjective implies that recent attempts to provide necessary a posteriori identities between goodness and something else must fail The convertibility of being and goodness the privation theory of evil a denial of the fact value distinction human nature as the ground of human morality and even a novel argument for the existence of God are some of the implications of the account of goodness that Alexander offers
