

fragments must first be cut in the appropriate place with the "restriction enzymes." The fragments may not fit nicely into the simulated gel electrophoresis table unless students cut them so that only the letters of the nitrogen bases are showing (cut away all excess paper above and below the letters). Use this simulation to detect which species (X, Y, or Z) is most genetically related to Botana curus. The key for the simulated gel electrophoresis is shown below.

The Carbon Fix Stephanie Paladino, Shirley J Fiske, 2016-11-18 Given the growing urgency to develop global responses to a changing climate The Carbon Fix examines the social and equity dimensions of putting the world's forests and necessarily the rural people who manage and depend on them at the center of climate policy efforts such as REDD intended to slow global warming The book assesses the implications of international policy approaches that focus on forests as carbon and especially forest carbon offsets for rights justice and climate governance Contributions from leading anthropologists and geographers analyze a growing trend towards market principles and financialization of nature in environmental governance placing it into conceptual critical and historical context The book then challenges perceptions of forest carbon initiatives through in depth field based case studies assessing projects policies and procedures at various scales from informed consent to international carbon auditing While providing a mixed assessment of the potential for forest carbon initiatives to balance carbon with social goals the authors present compelling evidence for the complexities of the carbon offset enterprise fraught with competing interests and interpretations at multiple scales and having unanticipated and often deleterious effects on the resources and rights of the world's poorest peoples especially indigenous and rural peoples The Carbon Fix provides nuanced insights into political economic and ethical issues associated with climate change policy Its case approach and fresh perspective are critical to environmental professionals development planners and project managers and to students in upper level undergraduate and graduate courses in environmental anthropology and geography environmental and policy studies international development and indigenous studies

General Technical Report PSW, 1978 A Guide to identifying priorities and indicators for restoration monitoring Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2019-09-25 This guide walks practitioners through seven questions to help them make decisions regarding restoration monitoring First practitioners are asked to determine their restoration goals land use and barriers to sustainability These choices are filtered by constraints and priorities so the practitioner will develop the indicators needed to setup their monitoring framework It provides a framework for identifying indicators Indicators are value laden measures of development performance designed to measure and calibrate progress Environmental indicators are used to provide synthesized knowledge on environmental issues and to highlight the extent of environmental trends They also help to reduce complexity provide important links between science and policy and help decision makers to provide guidance on environmental governance An indicator framework can provide a management tool to help countries develop implementation strategies and allocate resources accordingly to reach restoration goals Tracking progress with indicators can act as a report card to measure progress towards restoration and help ensure the accountability of all stakeholders for achieving the goals The guide uses country case studies to show how a practitioner could answer the questions offering a menu of potential indicators for measuring progress that other monitoring practitioners might find useful Next it highlights the different types of data that can feed into creating an indicator framework depending on resource constraints and information needs Some restoration programs may require fewer cost effective indicators that are collected locally Other programs may be able to integrate small locally collected data with big data from satellite imagery and social media
