England identifies a series of new topoi in Middle English that responded to the gentry's economic interests. But beyond social history and literary criticism, it also speaks to manuscript studies, showing that most of the codices of the gentry romances were produced by those in the immediate employ of the gentry. By bringing together literary criticism and manuscript studies, this book speaks to two scholarly communities often insulated from one another; it invites manuscript scholars to pay closer attention to the cultural resonances of the texts within medieval codices. Simultaneously, it encourages literary scholars to be more attentive to the cultural resonances of surviving medieval codices.
