Health Promotion and Prevention Monica Covarrubias Grand Canyon University- NRS 429V September 8, 2013

Nurses are in the forefront for becoming great, influential leaders in the transformation of future healthcare through the use of education and health promotion. As the population continues to grow, nurses are sought out as educators and not just caregivers. Nurses are also capable of providing the public with the education it needs to prevent illness and disease, and promote quality healthcare. By expanding emphasis not only on the individual, but family and community groups as well, a wider outreach for public health, promotion, and education can be addressed. There are three types of prevention described as primary, secondary and tertiary, which aim to prevent the onset of a targeted condition (GCU, 2011). Implementing health education to avoid health conditions as the primary prevention, aiding and treating symptomatic individual's as the secondary prevention, and restore function and negative effects of an already acquired disease as the tertiary prevention, the hopes to overcome and implement a cost- efficient, healthy lifestyle can be achieved (Fitzgerald, 2011).

Through health promotion, prevention, and intervention, the future of healthcare can be based on educating the public to promote longevity and quality of life by using primary, secondary and tertiary preventions. The World Health Organization (WHO) defines health promotion as "the process which enables people to improve control over the determinants of health, and as a result to improve their own health" (Jadelhack, 2012). By providing health promotion to others, the nurse is enabling the individual to take control, responsibility and action for their own healthcare. "Individually and through national associations, nurses, along with other healthcare providers, can be effective in paving the road for good health through health promotion" (Jadelhack, 2012). Through seminars, lectures, handouts, and teaching, nurses are educating the public to become their own advocates of care.

Through the use of health promotion and education, the nurse is teaching the individual about disease, prevention, and how to promote for the care of themselves and their families. The American Nurses Association (ANA) states, "Nursing must expand its efforts to design and implement interventions which support promotion of health and prevention of disease/illness and disability" (ANA, 2007). There are multiple dimensions that must be taken into consideration when referring to the health of an individual including, physical, mental, spiritual, and social. With the evolution of healthcare, nurses must begin to increase their efforts in health promotion by viewing the individuals they serve as holistic, and also considering the families and communities as well.

With the evolution of nursing into public, community, and home healthcare settings, nurses must now have a wide knowledge base, adequate critical thinking skills, and an active involvement in disease prevention, to promote quality health (Edelman & Mandle, 2010). The nurse must utilize the nursing process by assessing the individual's learning style and educational background in order to adequately present material to the individual. The nurse must plan, implement and evaluate the individual's change in lifestyle habits including physical activity, healthy eating, and motivation, need and desire in order...

Global Handbook on Noncommunicable Diseases and Health Promotion David V. McQueen,2013-07-03 Global Handbook on Noncommunicable Diseases and Health Promotion David V McQueen editor A scan of health challenges around the globe readily brings to mind a range of infectious illnesses from HIV to influenza Yet chronic non contagious conditions heart disease asthma diabetes cancer are more prevalent and their rates soaring across the developed and developing worlds

The Global Handbook on Noncommunicable Diseases and Health Promotion is an important resource for understanding and approaching chronic illnesses and their prevention. This timely text balances theory and strategies to provide an integrative context for health affecting behaviors regarding tobacco use, food choices, and physical activity. Coverage expands on current medical, clinical, public health perspectives, arguing that closer attention to social context is crucial to better use of health resources and more relevant preventive efforts. Possible roles for hospitals, the workplace, government agencies, NGOs, and other institutions are analyzed, as is the potential for addressing larger underlying health factors, e.g., inequities and poverty at the societal level. Topics covered include: The nature of causality beyond traditional evidence; Learning from the social sciences in chronic disease health promotion; Contextual factors in health and illness; Understanding and applying a social determinants of health framework for addressing NCDs; Public health NCDs; health promotion and business partnering; NCDs and civil society; a history and a roadmap. As the authors of the Global Handbook on Noncommunicable Diseases and Health Promotion make abundantly clear, opportunities are as numerous as the issues, and researchers and graduate students in global public health, health promotion, and chronic disease epidemiology will find these chapters positive and realistic.

Health Promotion in Long-Term Care Facilities Kallol Kumar Bhattacharyya, 2025-06-11. This book discusses biopsychosocial barriers and facilitators of long-term care services, focusing on health promotional activities targeted to maximize quality of life. This knowledge of meaningful activities helps to identify and improve strategies for supporting people living in long-term care facilities with various chronic disorders at a deeper level. Although no all-encompassing theory of caregiving has yet been developed, this book explores various theoretical formulations as central aspects of promoting health in long-term care practices. The current culture change in long-term care controls the well-being of the concerned person physically, psychologically, socially, and economically. In later life, these issues profoundly impact individuals' morbidity and lifespan. Further, it has been evidenced that the Centers for Medicare, instead of clinical quality measures only, is influenced by residents, their family members, staff, and administration. Person-centered care not only requires a culture change in how residents and caregivers work together but it also requires facilities to ensure staff deliver care with the highest possible level of empathy and adopt meaningful care practices. Among the topics covered in this contributed volume are: Quality of Care and Quality of Life; Synonymous in Long-Term Care; Aging in Place or Long-Term Care; Changing the Narrative to Promote Aging in Place in Long-Term Care; Person-Centered Care and Culture Change Movement in Long-Term Care; Extending the Age-Friendly Movement to Long-Term Care; Potential of Health Promotional Practices in Long-Term Care. Health Promotion in Long-Term Care Facilities is an essential resource for a diverse readership including academics and researchers in gerontology, aging studies, health management, and policy, health sciences, nursing, psychology, social work, and public health, as well as caregivers and policymakers. The book's academic value from a multidisciplinary perspective would be beneficial for students in the above-mentioned fields.
