The New Economic Policy

At the end of the Civil War, the Bolsheviks controlled most of the land and the Russian population was growing. There were both advantages and disadvantages to the new economic policy.

In response, Soviet leader Vladimir Lenin introduced the New Economic Policy (NEP) in 1921. The NEP aimed to make the Soviet economy by introducing a mixed system of state control and private enterprise. It allowed small-scale private businesses, particularly in agriculture and industry. The government also allowed the sale of private land and the use of money, which had been abolished during the civil war.

The NEP also encouraged investment in the Soviet economy. Agriculture and industrial production increased, and the standard of living improved for many. It marked a shift away from the radical policies of the early Soviet government towards a more moderate approach.
