H. Julien, R. E. McFadyen, Jim Cullen, 2012 Biological control of weeds has been practiced for over 100 years and Australia has been a leader in this weed management technique

The classical example of control of prickly pears in Australia by the cactus moth Cactoblastis cactorum which was imported from the Americas helped to set the future for biocontrol of weeds in many countries. Since then there have been many projects using Classical Biological Control to manage numerous weed species many of which have been successful. Importantly there have been no serious negative non target impacts the technique when practiced as it is in Australia is safe and environmentally friendly. Economic assessments have shown that biocontrol of weeds in Australia has provided exceedingly high benefit to cost ratios. This book reviews biological control of weeds in Australia to 2011 covering over 90 weed species and a multitude of biological control agents and potential agents. Each chapter has been written by practicing biological control of weeds researchers and provides details of the weed the history of its biological control exploration for agents potential agents studied and agents released and the outcomes of those releases. Many weeds were successfully controlled some were not many projects are still underway some have just begun however all are reported in detail in this book. Biological Control of Weeds in Australia will provide invaluable information for biological control researchers in Australia and elsewhere. Agents used in Australia could be of immense value to other countries that suffer from the same weeds as Australia. The studies reported here provide direction to future research and provide examples and knowledge for researchers and students.

KEY FEATURES A unique collation of information for Australian weed research and management. Contains all the information about biological control of weeds in Australia in one book. Provides key references for further information. Will become a well cited publication.

Managing Fear Bernadette McSherry, 2013-10-23. Managing Fear examines the growing use of risk assessment as it relates to preventive detention and supervision schemes for offenders perceived to be at a high risk of re offending individuals with severe mental illness and suspected terrorists. It outlines a number of legislative regimes in common law countries that have broadened civil as opposed to criminal powers of detention and supervision. Drawing on the disciplines of criminology and social psychology it explores how and why such schemes reflect a move towards curtailing liberty before harm results rather than after a crime has occurred. Human rights and ethical issues concerning the role of mental health practitioners in assessing risk for the purposes of preventive detention and supervision are explored and regimes that require evidence from mental health practitioners are compared with those that rely on decision makers notions of reasonable belief concerning the risk of harm. Case studies are used to exemplify some of the issues relating to how governments have attempted to manage the fear of future harm. This book aims to educate mental health practitioners in the law relating to preventive detention and supervision schemes and how the legal requirements differ from clinical assessment practices. It examines the reasons why there has been a recent renewal of preventive detention and supervision schemes in common law countries. It provides a comparative overview of existing preventive detention and supervision schemes and analyses the human rights implications and the ethics of using forensic risk assessment techniques for preventive detention and
