

Citizenship, Public Participation and Democracy

CPD1501 Examination

Question 1

1.1 Acquisition of citizenship by birth versus acquisition of citizenship by naturalization are two of the three methods in which one can acquire citizenship in South Africa according to the Citizenship Act 1995 and the other being acquisition of citizenship by descent. The process involved in the acquisition of the two differs according to the Citizenship Amendment Act 2010. In order to acquire citizenship by birth you need to:

- have been a South African citizen by birth just before 01 January 2013.
- have been born inside the Republic of South African or abroad and one of your parents is at the time of your birth is a South African citizen. Provided that the parent who qualifies the child for citizenship does not have citizenship of any another country or the right to such and that he/she is registered in South Africa in accordance with the Birth and Death Registration Act 51 of 1992. Also, you should be born in the Republic and lived in the Republic from birth to the age of 18 and your birth be registered in accordance with the Birth and Death Registration Act 51 of 1992.

However, to acquire citizenship by naturalisation one needs to:

- have already acquired citizenship by naturalization immediately prior to 01 January 2013.
- if you are already are citizen of a country that allows you to have dual citizenship.
- With children, an adult child qualifies for citizenship by naturalisation if his or her parents have not been admitted into the Republic for permanent residence

It is worth noting that both citizenships can be lost subject to certain violations by the holders of the citizenships.
