Organizational learning theory assumes that individuals, and groups, learn by learning. What are the primary concepts in the organizational learning

Model? How is learning in organizations related to the concept of knowledge? In this model, a change in knowledge has a direct effect on the behavior of the organization. How is this model different from the model of a single knowledge source model?

A single source model assumes that knowledge is contained in a single source, such as a single person or a single document.
