

Process Analysis

I. Definition

The formal name of the mode is process analysis.

Process = a step-by-step movement from a beginning point to an pointending.

Analysis = a careful examination; a close, detailed look at something

Process analysis writing involves writing to give instructions on how to do something or to describe how something is done. It is another common organizational form of writing. Current self-help books on the market entitled How To . . . are examples of process writing. Process analysis serves readers well if some simple steps are followed to maintain clarity. There are two basic types of process writing: informational and directional. Informational process writing provides information on topics we would like to learn about, i.e. how something works. An example would be an essay on how the heart functions. On the other hand, directional process deals with giving directions on how to do something. An example of this type of writing would be an essay giving directions on changing a tire or a recipe.

There are two kind of process analysis: One instructs or directs the reader how to perform a task, the other informs the reader how something is done, is made, or works.

A process paragraph is a series of steps that explain how something happens or how to make something. It can explain anything from the way to enrich vocabulary to overcoming insomnia to the procedure of operating a machine. It may also give tips for improving pronunciation or for answering a telephone call. Because such explanations must be clear, the process paragraph must be written in chronological order, and it must include a topic sentence that clearly states the paragraph's purpose. It must also include transition words and phrases such as "first," "next," "finally," that connect each of the steps.

There are two kinds of process paragraphs: directional and informational. A directional process paragraph explains the directions to perform a task. It provides the reader a set of instructions or a step-by-step guidance. The following is an example of a directional process paragraph:

Analytical Methods in Wood Chemistry, Pulping, and Papermaking Eero Sjöström, Raimo Alén, 1998-11-27 In its broadest sense and according to the traditional conception wood chemistry is a comprehensive discipline ranging from fundamental studies to practical applications The manifold constituents located in different morphological regions in the wood results in an extreme complexity of wood chemistry Ever more sophisticated endeavors needing fundamental studies and advanced analytical methods are necessary in order to delve deeper into various problems in pulping and papermaking Gradually new improved analytical methods originally developed for research purposes are currently replacing many of the old routine methods in practical applications Because of the expanse of the subject an attempt to write a book of this size about analytical methods seems perhaps too ambitious Of course a whole book series of several volumes would be necessary to cover this topic completely However there is undoubtedly a need for a more condensed presentation which does not go into experimental details but is limited to the basic principles of the analytical methods and illustrates their applications The emphasis is on more advanced and potential methods and particularly on those based on different types of spectroscopy and chromatography
