

A Reflection on Service Learning:

Working with Eric

The first time I saw the beautiful yet simple architecture of Waverly High School, I was enchanted. I remember driving by while exploring my new surroundings as a transfer student to Michigan State University and marveling at the long front wall of reflective windows, the shapely bushes, and the general cleanliness of the school grounds. When I was assigned to do a service learning project in a local school district, I hoped for the opportunity to find out what it would be like to work at a school like Waverly—a school where the attention to its students' needs was evident from the outside in.

Waverly High School, which currently enrolls about 1,100 students in grades 9 through 12 and has a teaching staff of 63, is extremely diverse in several ways. Economically, students range from poverty level to affluent. Numerous ethnic and racial groups are represented. And in terms of achievement, the student body boasts an assortment of talents and abilities.

The school provides a curriculum that strives to meet the needs of each student and uses a unique grade reporting system that itemizes each aspect of a student's grade. The system allows both teachers and parents to see where academic achievement and academic problems surface. Unlike most schools, which evaluate students on subjects in one number or letter grade, Waverly has a report card that lists individual grades for tests, homework, exams, papers, projects, participation, community service, and attendance. Thus, if a student is doing every homework

Reflective essays may include descriptive passages.

Background information about the school sets the scene for Gibson's personal experiences.

The Meaningful Writing Project Michele Eodice, Anne Ellen

Geller, Neal Lerner, 2017-03-01 In the face of the continuing discourse of crisis in US education The Meaningful Writing Project offers readers an affirming story of writing in higher education that shares students experiences in their own voices In presenting the results of a three year study consisting of surveys and interviews of university seniors and their faculty across three diverse institutions authors Michele Eodice Anne Ellen Geller and Neal Lerner consider students perceptions of their meaningful writing experiences the qualities of those experiences and instructors perspectives on assignment design and delivery This study confirms that meaningful assignments offer students opportunities to engage with instructors peers and texts and are relevant to past experiences and passions as well as to future aspirations and identities Meaningful writing occurs across majors in both required and elective courses and beyond students years at college Additionally the study makes clear that faculty across the curriculum devote significant care and attention to creating writing assignments that support student learning as they understand writing performance to be a developmental process connected to overall cognitive and social development student engagement with learning and success in a wide variety of disciplines and professions The Meaningful Writing Project provides writing center directors WPAs other composition scholars and all faculty interested in teaching and learning with writing an unprecedented look into the writing projects students find meaningful

Inquiries Into Literacy Learning and Cultural Competencies in a World of Borders Tonya

Huber, Philip S. Roberson, 2018-04-01 The vision of this book has been to represent the work of educators and scholars invested in moving education beyond insular models of language study and cultural awareness to more globally representative and inclusive interactions that range from the studied word to the lived experience and from reading the word to read the world Freire Macedo 1987 A fundamental aspect of this vision is to recognize the living nature of language and its intricate role in culture Culture is mediated through language Hauerwas Skawinski Ryan 2017 p 202 and the linguistic experience of difference is essential for developing cultural competence beyond surface culture considerations The editors of this volume are committed to a closer bond between literacy learning and cultural competencies particularly when literacy practices and education are often characterized by quantifiable standards and accountability restraints Readers of this volume will find meaningful and practical approaches to engage with learners from their earliest encounter with language s through adolescence and adulthood and across ever changing local and global communities
