

Weather - An Introduction to Weather

by Heather

What does the word "weather" mean to you? Each person living here in America has weather. There are beautiful sunny days with blue skies and then there are gray, rainy days, good for saying to kids that the word "weather" actually means weather! The picture shows that weather is tricky. Every year will have all sorts of different types of weather.

Let's describe a specific definition of weather. Weather is the condition that atmosphere all of planet Earth experiences. That means factors determine the weather: temperature, humidity, wind speed and direction, and air pressure.

Temperature is the measure of how hot or cold the air is. When the sun comes down on Earth, it gives us heat. Earth's surface, like that is what the temperature. Temperature all the way down from up the water on Earth. This particular temperature for many changes in weather, and sometimes patterns. It determines how many things happen.

Humidity is the amount of water in the air. The air always has water with it, but there are some changes with it. A lot of the weather conditions that we see change come from humidity. Clouds, rain, and snow all have to do with humidity.

Wind speed and direction are weather. They also have to do with the weather. Temperature and pressure also affect wind speed and direction. We have a lot of wind in the morning. When the whole humidity air up in the Earth's atmosphere and different directions are used on Earth.

Air pressure has to do with the thickness of air. It is measured air pressure. Imagine you are standing in a room packed with people. There is a lot of pressure in the room. You can feel the pressure. When you standing in a room with a lot of people, you can feel the pressure. When you standing in a room with a lot of people, you can feel the pressure. When you standing in a room with a lot of people, you can feel the pressure.
