Building Corporate Identity, Image and Reputation in the Digital Era T C

Melewar, Charles Dennis, Pantea Foroudi, 2021-07-29 Brands corporate products service today are collectively defined by their customers deriving from personal experiences and word of mouth This book acts as a forum for examining current and future trends in corporate branding identity image and reputation Recognising the complexity and plurality at the heart of the corporate branding discipline this book fills a gap in the literature by posing a number of original research questions on the intrinsic nature of corporate branding ideas from corporate external and organisation internal identity perspectives as they relate to brand management corporate reputation marketing communications social media smart technology experiential and sensory marketing It incorporates current thinking and developments by both multidisciplinary academics and practitioners combining a comprehensive theoretical foundation with practical insights The text will serve as an important resource for the marketing identity and brand practitioners requiring more than anecdotal evidence on the structure and operation of stakeholders communication in different geographical areas It determines current practices and researches in diverse areas regions and commercial and non commercial sectors across the world The book provides scholars researchers and postgraduate students in business and marketing with a comprehensive treatment of the nature of relationships between companies brands and stakeholders in different areas and regions of the world

Corporate reputation Ángel Alloza, Enrique Carreras, Ana Carreras, 2013-06 Reputation has become an essential strategic asset for companies Those businesses that enjoy a good reputation are able to differentiate themselves thus attracting investments and retaining customers and employees while at the same time stakeholders of such companies demonstrate higher levels of satisfaction and loyalty towards the companies products and brands Currently corporate reputation is one of the most popular non financial indicators used by organizations both in the public and private sectors This book is an in depth investigation of the psychosocial nature of corporate reputation and we invite the reader to join us on a journey of discovery When reputation first appeared as a concept it brought about promises and hopes It was viewed as a solution capable of reconciling the interests of different stakeholders and making the whole organization stronger However this giant soon turned out to have feet of clay as it was lacking in sufficient theoretical and methodological foundation Nonetheless when we step into the terra incognita of corporate intangible assets we will understand that the vague idea of reputation is gradually acquiring a scientific form thanks to the development of measurement tools and models that lay a foundation for the long sought after means of managing reputation Maximizing Corporate Reputation Through Effective Governance Daniel F. Oriesek,2004 The aim of this dissertation research is to develop an understanding of how components of the organizational structure leadership structures at the top level and resource allocation decisions may affect corporate reputation as defined by the reputation quotient RQ and which aspects of running a company top management should keep an eye on in order to maximize the reputation of their company Based on a literature review on the topic of corporate reputation and governance which comprises the first part of the dissertation a positivistic deductive approach was chosen and a self administered questionnaire has been developed that was sent out to the CEOs of the 60 companies currently covered in the 2002 RQ rankings The detailed discussion of the research method can be found in the third chapter Due to a low response rate the original research approach had to be adapted in that where available the information requested in the questionnaire was filled by the author with publicly available data from various sources including the Securities and Exchange Commission SEC brokerage reports company web sites and third party information providers aggregating information from these sources Because the data points obtained this way in all cases are based on official company disclosures i e SEC filings press releases published web sites for which the companies are held legally liable it is assumed that the quality of the data points obtained this way is just as accurate as from having received it as part of the filled out questionnaires This for one because of the legal implications mentioned above and for the other because the answers to the questionnaire would have been based on the same internal data used to provide information to the Securities and Exchange Commission and general public This adaptation of approach narrowed down the original sample size of 60 to 32 companies because for 28 companies not sufficient public information was available and or the companies were not listed in both the 2001 and 2002 RQ rankings A second effect is that fewer of the originally intended aspects especially relating to leadership could be investigated as no reliable public information was available Nevertheless the sample size was sufficient to draw statistically valid conclusions
