

Student Exploration: Populations and Samples

Background: Frequency distributions describe the entire population, whereas

Prior Knowledge Question (Predict): How did you think the data was distributed?

As frequency distributions calculate descriptive statistics such as the mean, standard deviation, and range, they are used to describe the data. The frequency distribution shows the frequency of each variable, without grouping.

1. How would you describe the shape of this distribution?

Normal distribution. The shape of the normal distribution is a bell curve.

2. In the above graph on right, identify what you think the frequency distribution might look like if the entire sample were made from individuals representing the data.

Student Exploration

As frequency distributions investigate each member of a population, they are used to describe a sample of the population. This distribution shows the frequency of each value in the population distribution.

3. How would you describe the data shown in the frequency distribution above? Is it more normal, skewed, or not normally distributed?

Normal distribution. The mean is 100. The mean is 100.

4. How do the distributions above differ, if they are at all? What is the difference between the two distributions? What is the difference?

1. The mean of each distribution is 100. The mean is 100.
