Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40 to 50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 10 years. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes, at a heart rate of 150 beats per minute. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on the HR and HRR of the subjects. The HR at rest decreased from 72 to 68 beats per minute, and the HRR at rest decreased from 28 to 24 beats per minute. The HR during exercise increased from 150 to 160 beats per minute, and the HRR during exercise increased from 78 to 90 beats per minute. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night temperatures that are longer than the standard atmospheric conditions will negatively affect the rate of decomposition of organic materials. To know that, there are factors that produce the change in the state of the forest.
- Increased moisture in the soil will negatively affect the rate of decomposition of organic materials, the length of the process may be delayed depending on the soil moisture characteristics.
- The soil pH is also an important factor, the way that change the process of decomposition, producing a more acidic environment, the process will be faster than those of a neutral environment. However, there is no doubt about the pH value of a soil.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will increase its output level until the marginal revenue is equal to the marginal cost.
