

The background of the cover is a painting of a Middle Eastern street scene. In the foreground, a man in a dark blue robe and a red turban is riding a dark horse. To his right, a woman in a red dress and a white headscarf is walking. Further right, a man in a blue robe and a white turban is standing. In the background, a large stone archway frames a view of a city street with buildings and a church. The sky is blue with some clouds. The overall style is that of a classic oil painting.

Cohen, In its famous opening chapter the Hebrew Bible describes creation as consisting of twin acts of making and separating God creates light on the first day and then separates it from the darkness just as on the next day God creates the firmament and then sets it in place to separate the waters above from the waters below And so it follows at least in theory that when human beings seek to create through the medium of their own artistry creativity or industry and are obviously unable to mimic the uniquely divine act of creation ex nihilo they seek to do so through the one part of the process they can imitate separation Indeed the famous quip that the correct way to make a statue of a horse is to take a huge block of marble and then to chip away the parts that don't look like a horse is just an amusing way of suggesting the same idea namely that the human creative process involves the perception of something embedded within something else and then the subsequent liberation of that thing from its former setting so that it may exist on its own and in its own right Literature of the Doctrine of a Future Life; Or, a Catalogue of Books Relating to the Nature, Origin and Destiny of the Soul, Etc Ezra ABBOT (the Younger.),1871 The Boy's Own Annual ,1896
