Science Green Book O Level:

The Green Book of Language Revitalization in Practice Leanne Hinton, Kenneth Hale, 2013-06-13 With world wide environmental destruction and globalization of economy a few languages especially English are spreading rapidly in use while thousands of other languages are disappearing taking with them important cultural philosophical and environmental knowledge systems and oral literatures We all stand to suffer from such a loss none more so than the communities whose very identity is being threatened by the impending death of their languages In response to this crisis indigenous communities around the world have begun to develop a myriad of projects to keep their languages alive This volume is a set of detailed accounts about the kind of work that is going on now as people struggle for their linguistic survival It also serves as a manual of effective practices in language revitalization Following are the key features 23 case studies of language revitalization in practice from Native American languages Australian languages Maori Hawaiian Welsh Irish and others written primarily by authors directly involved in the programs short introductions situate the languages to help make the languages more real in the minds of readers each chapter gives a detailed overview of the various kinds of programs and methods in practice today introductions and maps for each of the languages represented familiarize the reader with their history linguistic structure and sociolinguistic features and strong representation in authorship and viewpoint of the people and communities whose languages are threatened gives the readers an inside understanding of the issues involved and the community internal attitudes toward language loss and revitalization This book was previously published by Academic Press under ISBN 978 01 23 49354 5 Big science Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts, 2007-11-13 Government invests in a range of large scientific facilities to support and develop the nation s science base with over 860 million allocated since 2000 to construct 10 new large scientific projects These programmes include a Diamond Synchrotron costing 383 million to produce intense X rays and shorter wavelength emissions for examining structures at molecular and atomic level a new research ship RRS James Cook to conduct oceanographic and marine studies a budget of 40 million and a new Antarctic research station with a budget of 34.7 million for monitoring climate ozone and space weather Following on from a NAO report on this topic HCP 153 session 2006 07 ISBN 9780102944198 published in January 2007 the Committee s report examines how large scientific facilities are delivered and the how their value is assessed Findings include that the first two projects have been delivered largely to time and budget but other projects still at an early stage are forecasting slippage with five of the six most mature projects forecasting significant increases in the initial estimates for operating costs Research Councils have not always sufficiently evaluated options for locating new scientific facilities and have had difficulty in attracting a sufficient number of bidders for contracts to help build new facilities Performance indicators used by the Research Councils and project teams for monitoring the success of these facilities are not always sufficiently comprehensive or measurable and if the UK is to maximise the value of these facilities it needs to attract more young people into science to
