Marketing Apocalypse Jim

Bell, Stephen Brown, David Carson, 2003-09-02 The present volume of essays examines the extent to which the end of marketing is nigh The authors explore the present state of marketing scholarship and put forward a variety of visions of marketing in the twenty first century Ranging from narratology to feminism these suggestions are always enlightening often provocative and occasionally outrageous Marketing Apocalypse is required reading for anyone interested in the future of marketing The New Statesman ,1926 Flaunting Amanda Bailey, 2007-01-01 In the early modern period the theatrical stage offered one of the most popular forms of entertainment and aesthetic pleasure It also fulfilled an important cultural function by displaying modes of behaviour and dramatizing social interaction within a community Flaunting argues that the theatre in late sixteenth century England created the conditions for a subculture of style whose members came to distinguish themselves by their sartorial extravagance and social impudence Drawing on evidence from legal documents economic treatises domestic manuals accounts of playhouse practices and stage plays Amanda Bailey critiques standard accounts maintaining that those who flaunted their apparel were simply aspirants or gaudy versions of the superiors they sought to emulate Instead she suggests that what mattered most was not what these young men wore but how they wore their clothes These young men shared a distinctive sartorial sensibility and used that sensibility to undermine authority at all levels of society Flaunting therefore examines male style as a visual form of subversion against the norms of Renaissance England with the stage as the primary source of inspiration for collective identification A glimpse into both the celebration of and opposition to social irreverence in the early modern period Flaunting is a fascinating historical account of drama fashion and rebellion with surprisingly close parallels to the contemporary world Charming Cadavers Liz Wilson, 1996-12 In this highly original study of sexuality desire the body and women Liz Wilson investigates first millennium Buddhist notions of spirituality She argues that despite the marginal role women played in monastic life they occupied a very conspicuous place in Buddhist hagiographic literature In narratives used for the edification of Buddhist monks women s bodies in decay diseased dying and after death served as a central object for meditation inspiring spiritual growth through sexual abstention and repulsion in the immediate world Taking up a set of universal concerns connected with the representation of women Wilson displays the pervasiveness of androcentrism in Buddhist literature and practice She also makes persuasive use of recent historical work on the religious lives of women in medieval Christianity finding common ground in the role of miraculous afflictions This lively and readable study brings provocative new tools and insights to the study of women in religious life Culture and Tourism in a Smart, Globalized, and Sustainable World Vicky Katsoni, Ciná van Zyl, 2021-06-21 This book gathers the proceedings of the 7th International Conference with the theme Culture and Tourism in a Smart Globalized and Sustainable World held on Hydra Island Greece on June 17 19 2020 published with the support of the International Association of Cultural and Digital Tourism Highlighting the contributions made by numerous writers to the advancement of tourism research this book presents a critical academic discourse on sustainable practices in the smart tourism context improving readers understanding of and stimulating future debates in this critical area In addition to the knowledge economy and the concept of smart destinations the book addresses new modes of tourism management and development as well as emerging technologies including location based services the Internet of things smart cities mobile services gamification digital collections and the virtual visitor social media social networking and augmented reality
