When Phosphorus Trioxide, a common effluent constituent, is present in the effluent, it is often in the form of phosphoric acid. This acid is a strong irritant to the eyes, nose, throat, and skin. It is also a strong oxidizing agent. It is highly soluble in water and forms a strong acid solution. It is highly corrosive to metals and other materials. It is also a strong irritant to the respiratory system. It is highly soluble in water and forms a strong acid solution. It is highly corrosive to metals and other materials. It is also a strong irritant to the respiratory system.

These physicians' efforts to protect themselves against charges of bias, however, might also increase their vulnerability to charges of discrimination. Physicians' efforts to protect themselves from charges of discrimination by using common-sense approaches to patient care may be perceived as a form of discrimination against patients who are not perceived as being at risk for violence. For example, a physician who uses a common-sense approach to patient care might be perceived as being biased against patients who are not perceived as being at risk for violence.
