During the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who were employed in the health care industry grew by 50 percent. The growth was particularly rapid in the last five years of the decade, when the number of health care workers increased by 15 percent. The growth was driven by a number of factors, including the aging of the population, the increasing demand for health care services, and the increasing need for health care workers to provide care in the home. The growth in the health care industry has led to a number of challenges, including the need for more health care workers, the need for more training and education for health care workers, and the need for more research on the health care workforce. The following table shows the number of health care workers in the United States from 1990 to 2000.
