Investment in the Future

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CON) and an exercise group (EX). The EX group performed a 10-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 10-week training program. The EX group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Several measures that are well-suited with the use of light can also be used in the case of darkness, the length of the day can be extended by supplementing the light with infrared radiation.
- The use of natural light is important, but may change the place and time of the day. The problem is that, depending on the season, there is not sufficient light during the winter months of the year. Natural light is not sufficient for these periods of darkness.
