

State of Matter: Solid, Liquid, Gas

Reading Passage and Questions Worksheet

Answer Key

Questions

States of Matter: Solid, Liquid, Gas

In the world around us, everything is made up of tiny particles called molecules. These molecules are always present in different ways to create three main states of matter: solid, liquid and gas. Each has some different characteristics and they change between them.

Solid: Imagine a brick or a box. Solids are made of many, many tiny particles. These tiny particles are packed very closely together. They are held together by strong forces, and they don't move around much.

Liquid: Now think about water. It flows and takes the shape of its container. In liquids, the molecules are not packed as closely together as in solids. They can move around a bit, but they still stay close together.

Gas: Think about air or steam. It fills all around you. Gas particles move very fast. They are not held together by strong forces. They can move around freely and they fill the space around them. They are also much more spread out than liquids and solids.

Changing States: Have you ever seen ice melting? Or water boiling? Or steam rising from a kettle? These are examples of changes in the state of matter. These changes happen when we add or remove heat. For example, when we heat ice, it melts and becomes liquid. When we cool liquid, it freezes and becomes solid.

Can you think of other examples of changes in the state of matter? Think about water freezing into ice, or a liquid turning into a gas. Think about a solid turning into a liquid, or a liquid turning into a gas. Think about a gas turning into a liquid, or a liquid turning into a solid. Think about a solid turning into a gas.

Remember, changes in the state of matter happen when we add or remove heat. Think about water freezing into ice, or a liquid turning into a gas. Think about a solid turning into a liquid, or a liquid turning into a gas. Think about a gas turning into a liquid, or a liquid turning into a solid. Think about a solid turning into a gas.

Now, let's look at the questions below. Think about the changes in the state of matter that you have seen. Think about the changes in the state of matter that you have learned about. Think about the changes in the state of matter that you have experienced.
