Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years old, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. They were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of 30 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic exercise. The control group continued with their sedentary lifestyle. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week program. The HR and EE of the training group increased significantly compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
  - Turn off the lights at the end of the day.
  - Use red light for night time. Red light has the least effect on the circadian rhythm.
- The end of the day is important for the circadian rhythm. The producer should make sure that the plants have a dark period of at least 8 hours. If the producer cannot provide a dark period, the plants will not be able to produce as much as they would in a natural environment.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output, and if the price falls, the producer will want to produce less of the output.
