Predator-Prey Population Simulation

Pre-lab

Read the Predator-Prey Simulation Student Guide (assumptions and procedure). After reading the information on the classroom copy of the student guide, answer the following pre-lab questions before starting the activity.

1. What habitat is represented by the petri dish in this activity?
2. Which animal do the beads represent?
3. Which animal does the spoon represent?
4. As you do this simulation, you will be changing the number of beads in the dish and using the spoon to represent one or more predators during a generation. It is VERY important that you follow the assumptions and procedure closely for this activity to work. According to the assumptions:
 - a. AT LEAST how many mice are initially present in the meadow for each generation?
 - b. What is the maximum number of mice that can be in the meadow?
 - c. Surviving mice of a generation always double their numbers. If you have 8 surviving mice in your dish after one generation, how many mice will you need in the dish to start the next generation?
 - d. AT LEAST how many weasels are initially present in the meadow for each generation?
 - e. How many mice does a weasel need to capture to survive?
 - f. When will weasels produce offspring?
5. According to the procedure:
 - a. What materials (and how many of each) will you start with?

When assuming the task of preparing a book such as this one inevitably wonders why anyone would want to read it I have always sympathized with Charles Elton s trenchant observation in his 1927 book that we have to face the fact that while ecological work is fascinating to do it is unbearably dull to read about And yet several good reasons do exist for producing a small volume on predation The subject is interesting in its own right no ecologist can deny that predation is one of the basic processes in the natural world And the logical roots for much currently published reasoning about predation are remarkably well hidden if one must do research on the subject it helps not to be forced to start from first principles A student facing predator prey interactions for the first time is confronted with an amazingly diverse and sometimes inaccessible literature with a ratio of wheat to chaff not exceeding 1 5 A guide to the perplexed in this field does not exist at present and I hope the book will serve that function But apart from these more or less academic reasons for writing the book I am forced to it by my conviction that predators are important in the ecological scheme They play a critical role in the biological control of insects and other pests and are therefore of immediate economic concern Coexistence Within a Size-structured

Predator-prey Population Model Philip I. Kester, 2020 Group Selection in Predator-prey Communities Michael E. Gilpin, 1975-07-21 Many animals regulate their population density by patterns of behavior that would be easy to explain if the forces of natural selection acted to optimize group properties But Darwinian selection acts on individuals not groups and most simple theories have shown group selection to be too slow ever to oppose individual selection successfully In this book Michael Gilpin presents a model based on predator prey dynamics wherein nonlinear effects are important so that small advantages to the selfish individual are nonlinearly amplified into disaster for his group The result is that group selection can be rapid and powerful Of course many instances of apparent group selection can be explained by kin selection in other cases close examination reveals that seemingly altruistic behavior directly benefits the individual genotype as well as the group The value of the monograph is that it provides a robust model in which group selection pure and unadulterated can be seen to work Spatial Heterogeneity and the Stability of a Predator-prey Link Philip Haney Crowley, 1975
