There are few curricular programs or activities in the schools which help students develop skills that enable them to participate actively in voluntary civic or political activities. Literacy and especially civic writing is critical for participation in the civic process. But teaching civic writing which is distinguished by its purposes, contexts and a moral element in the writer's motivation has been neglected at all levels of education. Teachers must create classroom conditions which elicit civic writing and suggest civic or political purposes for it. Examples of advocacy writing which can be used to propose a public policy issue, law to support or oppose a proposed law to propose a law designating a state symbol or special day to identify a problem and propose a solution and to influence attitudes about identified social or political issues are presented. Methods of teaching and examples of civic writing which are motivated by a spirit of collaborative concern for others especially in regard to local government are presented. These include providing information, evaluating public programs, expressing support and obtaining information. Civic writing can have a positive effect on the students' perceptions of themselves as writers and as citizens. JHP
