An Ethics of Political Communication Alexander Brown,2021-09-27 Working in the tradition of analytic philosophy Alexander Brown argues that many different forms of political communication or anti communication that often infuriate the public can also be ethically or morally objectionable These forms include question dodging offering scripted answers stonewalling not listening disseminating propaganda pandering being insincere giving false denials issuing revisionist interpretations refusing to take responsibility never apologising boasting and gaslighting Brown invokes a host of normative reasons including those having to do with epistemic arrogance interference in autonomy and violating the right to be heard This is not to say that all things considered politicians should never engage in dubious political communication Sometimes these are necessary evils Brown argues however that further moral inquiry is needed to show why they are evils and to determine when the use of these rhetorical tactics can be excessive unreasonable or out of place

Identifies and conceptualises forms of dubious political communication Develops an ethical evaluation of political communication Considers possible justifications for the use of dubious political communication Makes practical recommendations on how to regulate unethical political communication
