Time Stood Still

With a building year on the Bay of Naples on the coast of Italy in 79 AD, the town of Pompeii was in the midst of its final days. The volcano of Mount Vesuvius was about to erupt.

In the depths of Pompeii, the people of the town did not know that the volcano was about to erupt. They were living their lives as usual, unaware of the danger that lay ahead. The town was a beautiful one, with its white buildings and its many temples and public buildings. The people of the town were proud of their town and its many achievements.

At first, the town was not in danger. The volcano was quiet, and the people of the town were not worried. They were living their lives as usual, unaware of the danger that lay ahead. The town was a beautiful one, with its white buildings and its many temples and public buildings. The people of the town were proud of their town and its many achievements.

But then, the volcano began to erupt. It was a great eruption, and the people of the town were in danger. They were living their lives as usual, unaware of the danger that lay ahead. The town was a beautiful one, with its white buildings and its many temples and public buildings. The people of the town were proud of their town and its many achievements.
